

Education and Research in Germany

The system for education and research in the Federal Republic of Germany is complex and distributed among actors of the so-called Bund (Federation) and the Federal States.

Most of the specific information concerning education and research in Germany is provided by several institutions responsible for their respective and specific areas. Kooperation international gives an overview by featuring a commented list of links to relevant institutions and information resources.

1 Education

1.1 Institutions

- German Federal Ministry of Education and Research (BMBF)
Education and research are a Federal Government policy priority, which is reflected in the development of the funding it is making available to these fields. The BMBF works to promote the talent of tomorrow. Regardless of whether it's initial job training or continuing education, lifelong learning or new technologies – the BMBF website provides information on educational policies and research facilities in Germany.
<https://www.bmbf.de/en/>
- German academic exchange service (DAAD)
The German Academic Exchange Service (DAAD) is one of the world's largest intermediary organisations in its field, supporting over 100,000 German and international students and researchers around the globe each year. The DAAD also promotes internationalisation efforts at German universities, promotes German studies and the German language abroad and assists developing countries in establishing effective universities. The DAAD website provides information on various study programmes and scholarships.
