The Deutscher Bildungsserver (German Education Server, or better Eduserver) is the focal internet guide to education related information on the internet. It provides fundamental and high quality information on internet resources to all those concerned – thus offering quick, up-to-date, concise and free access to information. As a meta server it primarily refers to resources on the German education system, which are mainly provided by the federal (Bund) and state (Länder) authorities, the European Union, higher education institutions, schools, state institutes, scientific societies, media providers and libraries. The German Education Server is a joint service by the federal government and the states.

The service for the target groups contains selected and structured information for education administrators, professionals in child care, parents, teachers, pupils, trainers, apprentices and trainees, students, target groups in adult education, (education) scientists and academics, special education professionals and social pedagogues.
