The Institut Luxembourgeois de la Normalisation, de l'Accréditation, de la Sécurité et qualité des produits et services (ILNAS) is a public service under the authority of the Minister in charge of the Economy.

For complementarity, efficiency and transparency reasons and for the purposes of administrative simplification, ILNAS brings together under a single entity several administrative and technical activities which used to come under the authority of several public entities, such as standardization, accreditation, audits of laboratory good practices, market surveillance of electric and telecommunication equipment, toy safety and general product safety, digital confidence, quality promotion, legal metrology and the designation of notified organizations according to the "New Approach" directives.
